Fewer things, longer.

A seasonless collection of twelve pieces in natural fibres, cut to be worn for years rather than months. We restock what works and quietly retire what doesn't.

A week in six pieces

Photographed over four days in an empty apartment in Oslo. Same six garments throughout — the only thing that changes is the order they're put on in.

LOOK 01 — MONDAY

Undone, on purpose

The shirt worn loose and untucked over the trouser, sleeves pushed back. It's the outfit we reach for most and the one that took longest to get right — the whole thing rests on the shirt having enough body to fall properly rather than cling.

SHIRTING

The Everyday Shirt

$128

A shirt with enough body to hold its shape and enough ease to forget you're wearing it. Cut a half-size generous through the shoulder, with a slightly dropped sleeve and a collar stiff enough to stand on its own. Washed before it ships, so it arrives already soft.
